(Group of the Progressive Alliance of Socialists and Democrats in the European Parliament, Austria)

68th QoC Talk:

Towards a New Pedagogical Culture

The presentation will be given by Dr. Martina Leibovici-Mühlberger from Austria. The presentation will be based on her recently published book entitled 'Der Tyrannenkinder-Erziehungsplan: Warum wir für die Erziehung ein neues Menschbild brauchen und warum Tyrannenkinder zu den Besten gehören können (translated: The pedagogical approach for children, that behave like tyrants. Why we need a new image of the human being to raise them and why these children could become the most flourishing'.

Time: Tuesday 6 March 2018 from 12.00 h until 14.00 h hours.

Location: European Parliament, Rue Wiertz 60, Brussels in the Library Room 128.

Entrance: We will gather at the Entrance at Place Luxembourg at 11.30h. Please be in time. It is obligatory to take your passport and/or ID Card with you.

Michiel Matthes prepared this programme based on documentation provided by Dr. Martina Leibovici-Mühlberger.

The Consumer Culture has a Shadow Side for our Children

Our current culture is focused on individual freedom and on attaining the best outcome for ourselves in the competitive global world at large. On the outside it looks as if we created in this way the best of all worlds. But when we look closer we see an ever larger concentration of capital in a few hands, an unjust inequality, the dominance of large corporations and a threatening ecological crisis which creates uncertainty regarding the pensions and the continuity of our social security systems.

Who is going to stop the people, Martina Leibovici speaks of 'Homo sapiens predator' (in the book she speaks of 'Homo sapiens bestialis'), that drive these developments?

The author argues that in order to address these grave societal challenges we must offer to the next generation a new image of the human being and a new consciousness.

From Homo sapiens predator toward the social Homo sapiens

Parents want the best for their children. But the aspirations that aim for maximum freedom and the full unfolding of the child's capacities conceal a pedagogical bankruptcy. Parents don't want to be blamed for being authoritarian and therefore they take on the role of a friend, coach or moderator of their children. But in this way the children are not given enough structure and orientation and in this way they are neglected pedagogically and may start to behave like tyrants. Martina Leibovici is not blaming these youngsters, but tells us that they are a wake-up call for the parents and society in general to stimulate the adults to bring order in the relationships with the younger generation. One of the key aspects in this context is that we must develop a new image of the human being. In Martina Leibovici's words: 'We must move away from the image of the human being as a 'Homo sapiens predator' towards the 'social Homo sapiens' (in the book she speaks of 'Homo sapiens socialis'). According to her this is today most urgent.

Towards a New Pedagogical Culture

The author focuses furthermore on the daily effort to raise our children. Many young parents are not ready to take up this responsibility. They have internalised the habits of the consumer society where you can buy a product with a probation period and return it within the guarantee period. Martina Leibovici remarks in this context: 'Parenthood is not for cowards', but she adds to it, that we as human beings are well equipped to become good parents.

When parents would look at the child from the child's own perspective and from the needs that are in tune with his/her developmental phase then the right parental behaviour will come in a natural way and this can be fun and playful.

Martina Leibovici states that it is important for parents to learn to distinguish the real needs of their children from the sudden desires for consumption and entertainment and she encourages the parents to become the expert of their own children.

The author is critical about the commercialisation of childhood and the continuous struggle of the parents to let their children excel.

The author encourages the parents to raise their children in a self-conscious and authoritative way and to focus on a rich family culture and to liaise with other families, and thus create communities that are beneficial in many aspects for all concerned.

5. Overall objectives of the QoC Talks:

- To gain a better understanding of the Quality of Childhood in the EU Member States. This time we will focus on 'Towards a New Pedagogical Culture'.
- To reflect on the role that the European institutions can play to improve the situation.
- To get to grips with the values, principles and approaches that could lead to improvements for children both in Europe and around the world.
- To form an effective working group and to get a sense of how to move on.

I take pleasure in inviting you for the 68th session on 6 March 2018.

With best regards,

Michiel Matthes
Chairman
Alliance for Childhood European Network Group
